Program Goal & Tracks

The main goal of the admissions program is to create a solid foundation for research, for writing, for choosing the universities, and for understanding their system — then funnel students into different programs after.

| TRACK               | WHEN IT APPLIES                                                        |
|---------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Scholars     | If the student is really strong, with limited financial resources.     |
| Flexible     | If we need to finalize some of the application components.             |
| Full Support | Rare cases — in most cases, students don't actually need full support. |

2.0 Keeping the Connection With Students

- It's very important to keep the connection with students, so we don't lose them to other programs that might not share the same values or the same processes.
- We lost quite a few students last year for this reason.
- Sometimes students clash with our approach — for example, some other programs offer to have the entire application written for the student, and some students go for that because it's free.
- It's important to keep in touch and show that care.

3.0 Identifying & Supporting Strong Students

What "strong" means here

- Students who were proactive during the program and really improved during the program.

How we support them

- Free meetings, free consultations, or extra care.
- Signing them up for flexible support to full support.
- Reporting on past cases.

Program Narrative

- This is a very special program for strong students — students who are ready to roll up their sleeves and really give their all to admissions, and who are also independent.
- Full support has stronger sales, but a lot more hand-holding.

5.0 Department Leader Responsibilities

- Address the weekly challenges the department might have.
- Write weekly messages and check in with students — ask what they're struggling with, check in with them personally.
- Identify strong students, check in with them, and see how to support them further.

This Week's Project

Sending boxes to students

Send boxes to all the people living outside of Uzbekistan or within Uzbekistan. Collect addresses again, then collect the boxes, sign them, and send.
